Stops in Capital With Prisoner. Detective Sergt. W. J. Conroy of New York, on his way home from New Orleans with Harry Inson, alleged embezzler, stopped in Washington over Sunday night, the local police caring for the prisoner. Inson, who is thirty years old and married, was employed by the wholesale liquor firm of Pichel & Schwab, 1851 Fulton street, New York city. It is charged that the prisoner absconded with about $2,000. He was traced to Canada and several cities in the west, and finally located in New Orleans. He will reach New York tonight.

Athletic Jemima

By WALT MASON

The Poet Philosopher

Jemima's great at basket ball, which game she plays with speed and zest; she won a silver cup last fall at some big school athletic fest. It does not make her stiff or sore to trot upon the cinder track; but when she has to sweep a floor it nearly breaks her heart and back. Upon the horizontal bar from rival girls she knocks the spots; and people come from near and far to see her tie herself in knots. Such wholesome, healthful exercise will never leave her tired and weak; it gives new luster to her eyes; and rosy blushes to her cheek. But when her mother says: "My dear, I wish you'd work this doggone churn," she says her heart is feeling queer, and she has aches and pains to burn. Jemima is a dead game sport, and she can play most any game; with foils and at the tennis court she's won a more than local fame. But when her mother says: "Sweet maid, I wish you'd wash the thomas cat," she answers sweetly: "I'm afraid I don't feel well enough for that."
